

CITY OWNS CORONERS' FEES.

Court of Appeals Sustains the Impounding of Their Salaries.

They Must Do the Sheriff Business Themselves or Pay for It.

Comptroller Myers was greatly pleased this morning by the announcement that the Court of Appeals had upheld his position in refusing to pay the salaries of the coroners of this city until they turn into the city treasury the fees collected by them while acting in the place of the Sheriff of the county.

The decision was handed down on an appeal from an order of the General Term of the Supreme Court affirming an order of Justice Barrett refusing a mandamus to coroner Louis W. Schultz to compel Comptroller Myers to pay to him the salary which the Comptroller had retained.

By the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure coroners are required to perform the duties of Sheriff where the Sheriff is debarred from acting by reason of being a party to an action.

There are hundreds of cases where goods are seized on execution by the Sheriff or his deputies, where the levy is attacked and the seized goods replevied by third parties, who claim the property. In such cases a coroner must serve the papers on the Sheriff or his representative.

To avoid the bother of all this, the coroners have for many years deputed a man named Francis Hawley to act in their stead, and have allowed him to pocket the fees collected in payment for his services.

Comptroller Myers took the position that these fees belong to the city, as the coroners are paid regular salaries and are entitled to no perquisites.

After he had withheld the salary of each of the coroners for several months, those officials decided to make a test case, and coroner Schultz began his mandamus proceedings. Just prior to election, the members of the Board of Coroners who were candidates for election, found that they would have to make terms with the Comptroller so as to secure money for their political assessments, and they agreed to accept a partial payment.

Now that the court of last resort has decided against them, the coroners will be obliged to do the work which has been done by Mr. Hawley, or they must pay the latter gentleman a salary for doing it, and turn the fees collected by him into the city treasury.
